Dear Frank:

He can't prove it, since no one was there! It's his word. It is his transformed life. It's his testimony. If he is lying, do you think God would bless him? There are people who saw him at the Palm Springs Church when he came to church with his overalls on. Why would you not believe him?

God bless you.

Sincerely,

Bonnie Ensminger

Secretary to Doug Batchelor

Dear Bonnie,

Thank you for your response. Do I think God would bless "who" if he was lying? Do you consider material wealth, writing books, speaking abilities, and speaking to large group of ears as being blessed. I find God's blessings in the sunrise every morning. I find God's blessings in my good health. I found God's blessings in the beautiful wild coyote that was only ten (10) feet from me while I was on the bike trail the other day. I don't lie or make up stories, God has blessed me for doing so. I have a completely different understanding on how God blesses people.

However, I have web site about my dad at raleyssexposed.com He was blessed too by God. However, his biggest disappointment in life involved a man that you (Bonnie) would considered blessed by God (based on your interpretation of Doug Batchelor being blessed) and this man also professed to be a Christian.

You indicate why I wouldn't believe him. Bonnie, the biggest liars I have encountered in my life were those individuals that professed to being a Christian...In fact, my web site has examples of that. Check out my Church page...raleyssexposed.com/church_links and other pages on my site. I am not saying Doug is a liar, I am just saying that there are multitudes of preachers in this world that have found it easy to lie in their lives to impress those around them.

Have a great day.

Frank
