Stewardship: Working the Family Business

We're at work in the Father's business.

Even in the multinational business environment of today, there are millions of small family businesses across the globe. In these family businesses, everyone has a place and every family member must fulfill his or her responsibilities in order that the business continues and thrives.

At baptism, we are adopted into God's family... and into the business of His mission. Each Christian is called to live in the free and joyous activity of being a child of God in God's family, the church, investing one's life and resources in the business of God's mission.

Christian Life Ambassadors work as communications links between the CNH District and their own congregations to help everyone live as active participants in God's family business

Purpose

Be a part of a network of initiators, implementors, educators, and motivators for the purpose of developing participants in investing all of life and life's resources for God's purposes.

Christian Life Ambassadors are trained to engage their fellow-members in the Christian stewardship of life. They work as communications links between the CNH District and their congregation, and to educate and motivate others to commit themselves as full participants in the business of God's family

Responsibilities & Qualifications

Christian Life Ambassadors (CLA's) are the link between the District Stewardship Task Force resource center and their congregations. They attend training sessions, subscribe to the In Touch weekly e-newsletter, and are familiar with the Congregational Stewardship Workbook (supplied by the District office).

CLA's are also responsible for communicating information related to Christian life with the pastoral staff, church leaders, and specific committees, groups or individuals.

Additionally, CLA's evaluate progress made in the spiritual growth of the congregation's year-round stewardship of the mission and report to the CNH District Stewardship Task Force.

CLA's should:

- Have a desire to bring the kingdom of God to people both personally and as a part of a congregation by reaching out into the community with the Gospel
- Be able to use the internet to resource web sites
- Understand the organization of the ministry teams in the congregation
- Communicate well with pastors and other leaders
