After a year's closure for a nearly total overhaul, the North Course at Foxtail Golf Club debuted in 2003 to wide acclaim in the Bay Area golfing community. Architect Gary Linn has put a dramatically fresh face on this 18-hole public course in the heart of Sonoma County. The $3 million renovation includes a completely new drainage system, forty-five new bunkers, four tee placements, and a rolling topography that creates unique visual interest and requires a thinking person's approach to the game. What hasn't changed is the preponderance of redwood trees that you can feast on throughout the course, along with the picturesque mountain backdrop that has always framed the region's vineyards and valleys. Just a minute off Highway 101 and immediately next door to the resort-style DoubleTree Hotel, Foxtail North offers a premium golf opportunity at public course prices. Banquet facilities, a pro shop and a new full-service bar area complete the picture at this sparkling new facility.
