

OVERVIEW

AeroSpace Singapore is a quarterly publication by the Association of Aerospace Industries (Singapore), or AAIS, covering the aerospace industry in Singapore as well as the region. The inaugural issue of AeroSpace Singapore was published in February 2008, with the aim of having it published bi-monthly later.

The aerospace industry in Singapore and the region is poised for massive growth and indeed, these are exciting times. A specialist magazine catering to this highly specialised niche, AeroSpace Singapore covers important issues of economic, commercial, legal, managerial, and operational aspects of the industry. Its contents focus on current affairs, technological advances, and new products and services. There are also sections devoted to Space Technologies, Defence, the Civil Aviation Authority, SMEs in the Aerospace industry as well as lifestyle.

Today, AeroSpace Singapore has established itself as a valuable information source, and an important business link between suppliers and users of aerospace components and services, with adequate space for business development and marketing opportunities. Available on a subscription basis, the magazine's reach has also expanded, with copies also being distributed at major events such as the Singapore Airshow.
